FOUNDING

The J. Reuben Clark Law Society was conceived in 1987 by Bruce C. Hafen, dean of J. Reuben Clark Law School, and Ralph J. Hardy, a prominent lawyer in Washington, D.C. Dean Hafen was seeking ideas from distinguished LDS attorneys for how to strengthen the Law School. Hardy opined that all LDS lawyers, regardless of where they had graduated, would be affected by the quality of a law school sponsored by BYU. The two men discussed the creation of an association that would benefit LDS attorneys throughout the country, envisioning an organization that would provide many advantages to its members, including mentoring opportunities, a referral network, and moral support for the challenges unique to being an active LDS law student or attorney.

Hardy proceeded to organize a major dinner in Washington, D.C., under the name of the J. Reuben Clark Law Society. At the dinner, held November 16, 1987, Elder Jeffrey R. Holland, who was then serving as president of BYU, offered some remarks. Bruce Hafen also spoke, as did Rex E. Lee. The next year the J. Reuben Clark Law Society was officially formed. The initial national board members were Wilford Andersen of Mesa, Arizona; Gary Anderson and William Mussman of San Francisco; Evrett Benton of Houston; Joseph Cannon of Provo; Val Christensen, Dale Kimball, and Michele Mitchell of Salt Lake City; Paul Gilbert of Phoenix; Ralph Hardy, William Ingersoll, and Brent Israelson of Washington, D.C.; Douglas Higham of Newport Beach, California; Nancy Stevenson (Van Slooten) of Downey, California; Monte Stewart of Las Vegas; Judith Thomas of Schaumburg, Illinois; and John Welch of Los Angeles.

CHAPTER FORMATION

Individual chapters were soon organized in Washington, D.C.; Phoenix; San Francisco; and Los Angeles. By 1995 there were 16 chapters in cities around the United States and Canada and over 4,000 members. By 2001 there were 28 chapters, with the number of member attorneys who had not graduated from BYU Law School increasing in percentage. The biggest increase in membership occurred after 2006, when student chapters were formally added to the society.

There are now approximately 100 chapters of the Law Society, with student chapters at approximately 100 law schools. These vibrant chapters are found throughout the United States and in Africa, South and Central America, Europe, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and island nations such as the Philippines and American Samoa.

INTERNATIONAL CHAIRS

The society owes a great debt of gratitude to the inspired vision of Ralph Hardy, who served as the first chair of the board. He has been followed in that capacity by Gary Anderson, Charles E. “Bud” Jones, Ralph R. Mabey, Marshall Tanner, William F. Atkin, Lew W. Cramer, Joseph Bentley, Brent J. Belnap, Nancy S. Van Slooten, and Douglas R. Bush. The society has been supported from its inception by an executive director and later by an assistant executive director, both appointed by the dean of the Law School and funded by the Law School, as well as by the General Counsel’s Office of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Scott Cameron and Mary Hoagland have served for many years as the executive and assistant executive directors, respectively, of the society.

WORK OF THE SOCIETY

In cooperation with BYU Law School, the society has published the Clark Memorandum since 1988. The society has also held a leadership conference at BYU each fall since 1992; sponsored an annual fireside since 2003, which originates at the LDS Conference Center in Salt Lake City and is broadcast over the LDS Church satellite network; and organized an annual conference since 2006. The attorney and student chapters of the Law Society conduct their own activities for the benefit of their members. These include CLE presentations, sponsoring and promoting pro bono and other service activities, institute and similar classes for student chapter members, mentoring and employment-related events, as well as a host of events and awards that promote the mission statement of the Law Society, which states: “We affirm the strength brought to the law by a lawyer’s personal religious conviction. We strive through public service and professional excellence to promote fairness and virtue founded upon the rule of law.”

Ralph Hardy, a former Area Seventy for the LDS Church, has stated that the society fulfilled the vision he had in the 1980s, but its inspired purposes were much larger than he could then see. Today the Law Society strives to strengthen its members in many ways. As Hardy has said, “All of these events and associations through the Law Society have helped refine valuable insight, tailored for my chosen profession, so that I know better what is expected of me and how I can meet the challenge.”
